If you are interested in supporting this request, vote for it. What versions of AutoCAD do you think are compatible with Windows 7 and Windows 8.1? A: You will be unable to install AutoCAD 2013 unless you have a valid AutoCAD 2012 (32-bit/64-bit) or later licence, or you have a student or education licence which doesn't require an activation key. You can use either the online or offline help for any version of AutoCAD, and you can access the online help for any version of AutoCAD that you have access to. However, the online help cannot be used to perform any actions in an instance of AutoCAD that is not activated or you don't have a valid student, education or personal licence. From the Autodesk.com website: Requirements AutoCAD 2013 requires a version of AutoCAD 2012 or later and Internet Explorer 8 or later with a Microsoft Silverlight plug-in version 5.0 or later. The online help for AutoCAD 2013 is available only on the Internet for AutoCAD 2012 or later. However, the online help for AutoCAD 2012 or later can be accessed offline as well. To use the online help offline, install and run Autodesk Architectural Desktop (ADT) 2011 or 2012 (for AutoCAD 2012). You may also run the product with AutoCAD 2012 or later as a stand-alone product. I've also been told that the version of AutoCAD you have has no bearing on which version of Windows you can use to install it, so if you have a version of AutoCAD that doesn't require an activation key and you have an 2d92ce491b
