(Direct Download - 3 days) Phil, We just finished discussing this on the forum, so I'll do my best to answer your questions. First, the dates on the book were just a suggestion. I was trying to put the dates on the post when it was originally posted. We could just as easily have had the post date as the book publication date. I used the "unavailable" links because I figured the book was being sold off and the download was unavailable for those people. I didn't think it was very likely that the book was available for purchase, especially with the copyright holder. The second point, was the idea that there was no factual basis for using an "unavailable" link. It's easy to say that the links are "unavailable" but that's not necessarily true. We were in a unique situation, and we made the best decision for those who were trying to find the book and couldn't. My understanding is that the Fountaining Five has been working on a big book project over the last few years, and the copyright holder for that book has been pressuring them to come out with a book. They simply aren't very good about putting their projects on the internet before their book is published. We were coming at this from a different angle. Our publishers had asked the Fountaining Five to do something that was impossible for us to do – put on the internet a big collection of the Fountaining Five's work. They wanted to do it that way, and they wanted it done as soon as possible. The problem was that the Fountaining Five couldn't release their work that way. They couldn't release their work that way for copyright reasons. They simply had a contract with us that allowed us to put their work on the internet in that way, and that's what we did. If you'd like, we can talk more about this in the forum. We're a group of authors who are meeting with the book's copyright holder. We're meeting to make sure we can get the work onto the internet. Q: How to fix image field for multiline text area I've created a post type for "gallery" (not a classic WP gallery, but a simple gallery) and I want to use a "Simple Lightbox" plugin for the image attachment, to show some details about the image inside the gallery. To do this, I've created a field type for the image: 0, 'gallery_thumbnail' => null, 'gallery_title' => null, 'gallery_caption' => null ), $atts)); return ".$content."; }
