In fact, Heretic is a simple and efficient program with which you can record your mouse movement, keystrokes and clicks for later usage. It is made of two parts. Part 1 - Simple Firstly, you have the normal interface. As an example, we can record mouse movement and click events by pressing the Record button, just below the mouse cursor. The results of these actions are highlighted by gray boxes (excerpt from the file provided by the author). There is no step by step tutorial, and we have no option to alter the default recording settings. Nevertheless, the interface is intuitive and simple. The recorded action is played back when the program is started, and you are asked to choose if you want to continue with the current recording. To stop recording, you simply press the Stop button. Part 2 - Advanced Secondly, you have the advanced interface. This interface is oriented towards more experienced users. So you can configure recording settings by pressing the Options button. There, you will find five different options, from none at all (raw recording) to extended (which allows you to record mouse movement at various positions on the screen). There is also a setting for recording mouse button clicks. We can save recordings in WAV, MP3 or MIDI files. And of course, you can make Heretic skip pauses.
