I've always been a fairly humble person, who doesn't think a lot of herself. I've only been confident in a few things throughout my life: 1) Writing, 2) Drawing, and 3) Playing the guitar. I've always felt that I could be good at anything if I worked hard enough at it. I've met a few people who have told me that my plans are going to fail, that they're going to have to say no. To them, I have a simple answer: I'm not going to fail. I've never been good at letting people down and letting them be my "manager". I just don't think that I'm up to it. I've always been afraid to admit I didn't know what I was doing. I also worry that I will find out a lot of my plans aren't going to work out, and that I will end up going broke. From the people who have told me that I was going to fail, I've gotten some very good advice. One of the things they told me was that if I wanted to succeed, I needed to make sure that I didn't become a manager, but a leader. That I needed to keep my "crew" small, and to look forward to setting my own goals, and to making my own plans.

A: Actually it was a regression in LXDE, which is now fixed. I have no idea why, but it's broken on the Lubuntu LTS version, but fixed on the newest version: You can install a newer version of LXDE if you want. E6-AP acts to counteract E6 oncoprotein-induced degradation of p53. The aim of this proposal is to determine how the E6 oncoproteins are targeted to their E6-AP binding sites on p53. The three specific aims are to determine: 1) the mechanism by which the E6 proteins target the E6-AP binding sites on p53, 2) the nature of the E6-AP binding sites and their interactions
