The presence of fibrosis in the postoperative bone showed a significant correlation with the worse histological pattern in the preoperative biopsy. This finding supports the theory that the healing potential of the patients with fibrosis in the preoperative biopsy is not optimal. Although multiple factors, such as systemic effects, local trauma, the difference in fixation in the pre- or postoperative period, and the presence of fibrosis might also affect the healing potential, we propose that preoperative biopsy plays an important role in determining the prognosis for patients with jaw cyst. None of the patients had evidence of metastasis or recurrence. Treatment outcomes such as the presence or absence of complications and the rate of recurrence were not associated with the presence of fibrosis in the preoperative biopsy. Although Sauer et al. [12] reported that fibrosis has a bad prognostic impact for the

KEYMACRO is a password manager and keystroke logger. The program allows you to record and export keyboard input data. The exportation is done as a structured text file. The files can be opened in most programs. So you can use the exported file for other purposes. The recorder works in three modes. The basic mode is called "PrintKey". It records the keys that are pressed on the keyboard. The application can also be used as a text editor. The advanced mode is called "Recall". This mode is intended for use with programs that require a constant connection to the keyboard, like the Windows operating system. The recorded data can be played back and executed by a password program. The third mode is called "Copy". It allows you to record the keys that are pressed when you press the hotkey of a program. The hotkey is defined in the Windows registry and is printed on a control panel. You can also set a hotkey for a program. All three modes can work with "PrintKey". There is a timer and an indicator for the recording process. This way you can set the time between every key stroke. KEYMACRO Keystroke logger is easy to use. It is a very easy program. Just press the start button to start the recording. In the "Recall" mode you can use all the functions to play back the keystrokes. Using "Copy" mode, you can set a hotkey for a program. The hotkey can be defined in the Windows registry. The timer controls the length of the recording time. You can start the program from the Windows tray or you can install it to the Windows desktop. When the timer reaches the end of the recording time, a "Stop" button is shown. You can use the program like a text editor. Press the "I" button to open the indicator of the recorded keys. In the "PrintKey" mode the program shows the key strokes that are recorded. In the beginning of each record you can see a time stamp. You can press the "A" button to show the application menu and start an export to a text file. To save the recording you can press the "S" button. The exported text file can be opened in many programs. You can print the file in a special way or you can email it. Main Features: Keystroke logging in all three modes. Timer control for the recording time. Keystroke 77a5ca646e

I've implemented my custom string serialization into the service, and it is being called, but it's only serializing empty strings. There are no exceptions being thrown, and I can manually serialize the JSON and send to the service without a problem. Here's an example of what the JSON looks like: { "Name": "Test", "List": [{ "Name": "Test 1", "Count": 3 }, { "Name": "Test 2", "Count": 3
