Jim Brown climbed Mount Everest in 1968 as a teenager. At the time of his death in 2012, he was the oldest living American to summit the mountain. He was 85 years old. But shortly after his passing, local media outlets in New Jersey began to investigate Brown's background. They found that he did not graduate from high school until he was 19 years old. The papers say the documents verifying his high school graduation were forged. Brown reportedly sent the forged papers to the U.S. Navy in an attempt to enlist. YouTube initially approved Brown's video in September. In November, however, he received a letter from YouTube's head of policy and safety explaining that the video violated the site's terms of service. According to the letter, the site doesn't allow people to post video if they claim to have done something they actually did not do. However, it has now been taken down after an extensive review by YouTube's "brand safety team" to ensure that Brown's record was not falsified. From Wikipedia: Jim Brown was born in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and attended local schools. His family was part of the African American community of his hometown, although he was the only person from his family who grew up to be an athlete. He served in the U.S. Navy, retiring as a Chief Petty Officer. Brown said he was afraid to tell his parents he had become an athlete while they were in the military. He began his professional career in the National Football League (NFL) in 1951 as a running back for the Cleveland Browns. After an injury forced him to miss the 1952 season, he moved on to the Pittsburgh Steelers, where he spent the next decade playing for the team, making the All-America team three times (1954, 1956 and 1958) and winning the NFL championship in 1959. In the 1960s he played professional football for
